This seminar is free and open to the public.

Nena Stoilkovic is making her first visit to Australia as Vice President for Asia and the Pacific for IFC, the International Finance Corporation, a job that gives her responsibility for all IFC operations in East and South Asia, as well as the Pacific.

IFC—a sister organisation of the World Bank and member of the World Bank Group—is the largest global development institution focused on the private sector in emerging markets. It aims to find ways to direct more private investment into the countries and communities where poor people live.

In conversation with Professor Stephen Howes, Ms Stoilkovic will discuss IFC's new strategy, its approaches to maximising finance for development and private sector investment, and its work in the Asia Pacific region.

Ms Stoilkovic has global experience in development issues such as climate change, gender, and fragile and conflict-affected situations, and has previously served in a number of leadership positions at IFC and the World Bank.
